THE MULTIPLE HEALTH BENEFITS OF HERBS & PLANTS *

Basil

Basil contains Vitamin A, Vitamin K, Iron, Manganese, Calcium and essential oils. It can benefit our digestive and nervous system and ensures that we have an optimal digestion. Basil contains potent essential oils that can help heal and cleanse our skin from within. It also contains adaptogen, an anti-stress substance. Therefore, recent research shows it helps deal with anxiety and control over our energy and happiness-inducing hormones.

Bitter almond

Bitter almond is rich in antioxidants, helping combat free radicals and support overall health. It may strengthen the immune system and has been studied for potential anticancer properties, though caution is advised due to its natural compounds. Additionally, its healthy fats contribute to cardiovascular wellness, while its minerals support bone and muscle health.

Cardamom

Cardamom is a spice with a distinctive flavor. It possesses antioxidant and anti-inflammatory properties, which can help protect cells from damage and reduce inflammation. Studies suggest that cardamom may aid in lowering blood pressure by relaxing blood vessels. It also has potential benefits in improving lipid profiles and managing blood sugar levels. Additionally, cardamom has been traditionally used to alleviate nausea and vomiting.

Cinnamon

Cinnamon has been known since ancient times, with reports that it was already used in ancient Greece and Egypt. Cinnamon was so highly valued among ancient peoples that it was considered a gift suitable for monarchs and kings. Cinnamon helps manage diabetes by reducing blood glucose levels and has strong antioxidant and cardioprotective effects.

Fig

Figs are known for their distinctive sweet flavor and rich, juicy texture. Their consumption is particularly widespread in Greece. Figs are shaped like small pears and can vary in size and color depending on the variety. The skin of the fig is thin and delicate, while its interior is filled with small seeds and juicy flesh. The fig is a fruit rich in nutrients essential for good health, consisting mainly of carbohydrates, simple sugars to which its sweetness is attributed, while it contains small amounts of protein and fat. Fiber is essential for good intestinal health and helps reduce the risk of chronic diseases, such as diabetes, cardiovascular diseases and certain forms of cancer. In addition, figs are a good source of minerals, such as calcium and magnesium, as well as vitamins, such as vitamin K and B.

Hyacinth

Hyacinth bean is a climbing plant that produces seeds (beans). The seeds, pods, leaves, flowers and roots are eaten. The seeds are used as medicine. People take hyacinth beans by mouth to prevent pregnancy and for diarrhea and stomach disorders.

Lemongrass

Lemongrass is a fragrant herb containing compounds like citral, which exhibit antioxidant and antimicrobial properties. Consuming lemongrass tea may help relieve anxiety, lower blood pressure and improve oral health by combating bacteria responsible for cavities. Some studies also suggest potential anti-inflammatory and anticancer properties.

Mastic

Mastic is a resin, which comes from a bush called "skins". The use of mastic dates back to ancient Greece, where it was widely known for its medicinal properties. Mastic has anti-inflammatory and antioxidant effects, as well as contributing to dental hygiene by removing tartar.

Melon

Melons, such as cantaloupe and muskmelon, are hydrating fruits rich in vitamins A and C, which support immune function and skin health. They also provide folic acid, magnesium, potassium and carotenoids, contributing to overall health. The anti-inflammatory nutrients in melons can help reduce the risk of chronic diseases.

Mint

Mint is a beloved herb that is widely known for its strong aroma and its use in gastronomy and traditional medicine. Consuming mint will provide us with small amounts of vitamins, mainly vitamin A, the antioxidant vitamin C and folic acid. As a medicinal ingredient, it was used by Hippocrates for stomach and intestinal pain, but he used it mainly to combat stress and anxiety.

Mountain tea

Mountain tea is a traditional herbal tea that derives from the siderite plant. This herb thrives in the mountainous regions of the Mediterranean countries, including Greece. Mountain tea has been known since the time of Dioscorides and Hippocrates. They recommended it as a tonic herb and praised it for its healing properties, ideal for treating wounds from iron objects in battles (swords, arrows), to which it owes its name. It helps the human body reduce cholesterol, improve bowel and cognitive function.

Rosemary

Rosemary is an aromatic herb rich in antioxidants and anti-inflammatory compounds. It has been traditionally used to improve digestion and enhance memory and concentration. Rosemary contains carnosic acid, which may protect the brain from oxidative stress and reduce the risk of neurodegenerative diseases. Additionally, its antimicrobial properties can help maintain oral health.

Spearmint

Spearmint is a widely used herb known for its refreshing aroma and potential health benefits. It contains antioxidants such as rosmarinic acid, which have anti-inflammatory properties. Spearmint tea has been studied for its ability to reduce testosterone levels in women with polycystic ovary syndrome (PCOS), potentially improving hormone imbalances. Additionally, spearmint may help alleviate nausea and improve digestion.

Thyme

Thyme is one of the most well-known aromatic plants, found in areas of the Mediterranean, South Africa, Asia and Europe. Since ancient times, thyme has been used as a natural product to enhance the flavor of foods but also to treat various diseases and symptoms such as suppressing coughs, better managing the common cold, pneumonia, dental plaque and many others.

Turmeric

Turmeric is one of the most popular spices, used since ancient times in the Mediterranean and Middle Eastern countries. In addition to its rich flavor, it provides great benefits to the health of the human body, particularly in the health of our joints, our heart, but especially in the proper function of our brain.
